Trends in scenic art – theatre and dance

- A distinct trend in Norway is that the borders between dance and theatre is being erased.
- Great diversity of expression
- Performative visuality
- Political engagement
- Perspectives from different cultural backgrounds, not only the typical Norwegian
- Freelances and small companies often in collaboration with the established scenes

The picture is from the theatre project Folk Tale with Teater Innlandet and the czech companies Divadlo ANPU and Buchty a loutky.

Trends in visual arts:

- A strong tendency both from artists, institutions and festivals is nature – climate – and environment themes in the art.
- Another trend is researching new technologic possibilities and how new media technology influences the human.
- A general tendency with both single artists and institutions is trying to reach a broader audience and how to improve their income possibilities. This can be seen by using new distribution platforms and new cooperation constellations.

TRANS(e)MISSION was a cooperation between CIANT in Prague and TEKS in Trondheim.

Trends in literature:

- Many titles are produced each year, but the media debate tends to circle around only a few.
- Norwegian literary journals exist in a big variety, and many has a high quality. But many of them are run idealistically and has a low income.
- Literature for children and young has a strong standing in Norway, but still needs to be encouraged. The Art Council Norway started in 2018 a pilot grant scheme called «Creation of literature with children and young» where authors, illustrators and grafic designers are encouraged to cooperate with kids 0-18 years to co-create litterature.

Tips for partner search – literature:

The House of Literature, Fredrikstad.

We have 3 big literature houses in Norway:

- Fredrikstad Litteraturhus

- The National Library can assist in search for matching libraries. Contact Arts Council Norway for more info.

Trends in music – Norwegian scene:

Brak in i Bergen is one of the 7 new competence centres in Norway on music. Photo: Brak

- Composers and performers cooperate more often about the creation of artworks.
- More music is created in a process between song writers, producers, studio production and in a mix of different art forms.
- More musicians and composers now make their work relevant for a bigger public.
- Demand for music to reach out to a bigger audience and in different/more arenas and platforms.

Tips for partner search – music:

7 regional competence centres spread all over Norway. These cover all kinds of music genres. Supported by the Arts Council Norway:

- RYK Rytmask kompetansenettverk (North Norway)
- Tempo (Trondheim)
- Brak (Bergen)
- STAR (Stavanger)
- Sørf (South-Norway)
- ØKS – Østafjelske kompetansesenter (Buskerud and Vestfold)
- Møst – Musikknettverk Østlandet (Oslo ++)
